

ACFA statement on Traceability

Traceability is an integral part of Alberta feedlot operations, enabling producers to make informed animal health and management decisions. Effective traceability throughout the entire Canadian beef supply chain would allow for rapid identification and response to food safety issues, disease outbreaks and emergency situations.

The Alberta Cattle Feeders' Association supports continued improvements to traceability in the Canadian beef industry and recognizes the value of advancing regulatory frameworks which enhance the effectiveness and efficiency of these systems. Any changes must be practical and beneficial to the entire beef sector, while still ensuring the ability for rapid response.
